

A Little Less of You

Doc says my health lacks balance:
It shouldn't tip like a rocky canoe.
So if I need another dose of Xanax
He prescribes a little less of you.

It's the recipe for happiness:
Take a cup of love that's true,
A pinch of Pineapple Express,
Then add a little less of you.

I could have lived in an old chateau
Where every room had a view.
There's no telling the life I'd know
If I had a little less of you.

Stocks are really not my game
But I know one plus one is two.
If you keep driving me insane
I'll invest a little less in you.

If I could change, I'd be a saint;
I heard it straight from my guru.
But he did have one complaint:
I could do with a little less of you.

It's the ancient Law of Attraction:
Under the sun, nothing is new.
Call it addition by subtraction:
Let's begin with a little less of you.

Jackson Hogen
October 5, 2011